My 2000 Mazda Protege seems to have some electrical problems. The check engine light is on but the codes can not be read - it seems that there is no power supply from the car to the OBD2 tool through the port. Also, the audio system (stock) will not turn on, not even the clock, just it's back lighting still works when the head lamps are on.

The first thing you have to frequently check under your hood is the level and cleanliness of your engine oil. Top it up when it's below the "L" or the minimum line because driving with low oil level can cause engine problems. Every 2,000 to 3,000 miles, change the oil—along with the oil filter—with the type suggested by your manual.
