I just finished replacing the water pump on my 2005 200 E-tec (E200DPLSOC). Great water pressure. Noticed a slight amount of what appears to exhaust gases excapeing between the lower unit and the midsection on both sides. Is this normal or would it be recommended that I go back in and replace the upper and lower rubber exhaust housing seals?

I recently had my brand new E Tec's lower unit catastrophically fail during a vacation in the Keys. Just turned it over to the dealer for repair. I guess I will find out how good the warranty is in a day or two. The engine has 120 hours and has run great except for this poorly timed failure. I hope BRP will make it right.
