The new racing car was covered in straightforward aluminium 'spider' body, easily recognisable by the large 'egg-crate' grill in the now familiar Aston Martin shape. David Brown had intended to debut the DB3 during the 1951 24 Hours of Le Mans, but a mere two months before the race the car only existed on paper.

History The DB3 was not as successful as Aston Martin had intended so they tasked Watson to design and engineer a new car. The result was the DB3S, a design that was based on its predecessor but featured a smaller wheelbase and a lighter chassis. The DB3S were built in two series, the first being numbered one through ten, from 1953 through 1956, and built primarily for the works team.
